Subramanian questions GDP figures of which he too was a part

New Delhi, June 11 (IANS) Subramanian Swamy on Sunday questioned the accuracy of official GDP data for the period during which he was the part of the government for some years. From 2013 to 2018, Subramanian Swamy has been a part of the government, and now not even those questions are entertained.

The overall GDP growth for 2017-18 was 6.7%, best since the 1990s, according to the government data. It is in the last few years of this fiscal year that India surpassed the growth of China. The Indian economy had grown at 9.7% in the year and the gross domestic product (GDP) of 2016-17, the economy had grown at 7.2%.

On debate, he added, "The rules of the game have changed. It is now no longer in the public interest to keep the economy growing and invest in infrastructure investments for tomorrow. Capital formation and accumulation of backlog have reduced."

Commenting on the Subramanian Swamy’s statement, Union Minister of Commerce and Industry, Piyush Goyal said, "We are not only growing..."
